

Skip to main content

r/biotech X

Search in r/biotech

Create

For your security, we've locked your account after detecting some unusual activity. To keep using Reddit, reset your password.

Reset Password

r/biotech • 2y ago
Sweaty-Honeydew2242

Pfizer/Legacy Seagen Employee

Layoffs & Reorgs ✂

I am a current Legacy Seagen employee in Seattle awaiting (along with all my coworkers) to learn next week if Pfizer has a job for me. This morning, there was a Pfizer town hall that was the most useless corporate meeting I've ever attended. "Challenging times" was a phrase used often. I especially enjoyed the cartoon they incorporated into the presentation to teach us the formula for how profit is calculated and the shareholder character. I feel more than ever like I live in the film "Office Space" with the Gordon Gekko speech thrown in. My 6 months as a Pfizer employee since they aquired Seagen has been 2 thumbs down. Where my Seagen peeps at?

↑ 270 ↓ 67 🔔 ↗

Join the conversation

Sort by: Best ▾

🔍 Search Comments

McChinkerton • 2y ago

Pfizer town halls by far have always been the biggest corporate word bingo bullshit ive ever attended at all levels. Zero substance that could always be summarized in a 5 word sentence. Their lack of transparency even before any layoffs was always jarring to me. Good luck to all those that are still there

⊖ ↑ 155 ↓ 🗨 Reply ...

[deleted] • 2y ago

Just OWN IT. Bust out the Strait Talk coin if needed 🤪

⊖ ↑ 69 ↓ 🗨 Reply ...

SmellyGreek • 2y ago

I lost my coin and am bummed as it's a ridiculous piece of corporate lore

⊖ ↑ 36 ↓ 🗨 Reply ...

drums7890 • 2y ago

A clown Sr Director showed me his coin during my interview and it was supposed to impress me. #nojerks

caveat_actor • 2y ago

Skip to main content+ Createdrums7890 • 2y ago

It was to show me what a great culture they had. I was still a grad student and desperate for a job so I ignored several red flags

caveat_actor • 2y ago

That sounds like a Michael Scott move

-Chris-V- • 2y ago

Wait can you explain this please? I haven't had the um...pleasure(?) of working at Pfizer.

Haha nevermind. Googled it. Just as bad as I thought.

McChinkerton • 2y ago

Thats the ridiculous part. Some of the corporate campaigns actually made sense. They just never kept consistent with it

Pacificsexlegend • 2y ago

Does anyone remember the are you a jerk questionnaire??

Deep_Caregiver_8910 • 2y ago

Where can I find myself one of these?

resorcinarene • 2y ago

same here. I need this in my curio shelf

nevernotsusmoon • 2y ago

I threw mine out same day I received it

cerevescience • 2y ago

that's some real straight talk

Skip to main content+ Create

[deleted] • 2y ago

Spirited-Albatross-6 • 2y ago

Condolences. I'm a Pfizer acquisition survivor - so it can happen. If you are at a mfg site you have a better chance or at least the site will be maintained & sold. If you're at corporate - that resume should have already been polished and ready to send. I was at corporate at my company- easily 90% of corporate employees are gone from my company. The higher you go up in the org chart the sparser it is. It may be a year or two down the line, but it's more likely your job is going away. You guys are coming in at an awful time. But at least they forced everyone back into the office to watch the layoff bloodbath!/.s.

Oirep2023 • 2y ago

That's Pfizer for you

cdmed19 • 2y ago

Top 1% Commenter

There's always hope, Andover and Pearl River are still around from Wyeth, CovX and Rinat lasted longer than I would have thought, I think there's even a Pharmacia site or two is still kicking. It all comes down to the cost/benefit decisions from the folks who thought Lipitor was a niche product, Exubera was a blockbuster, and every government would spend billions every year on Covid vaccines so you know good luck. Big Pharma town halls from what I've experienced are generally all the same useless corporate BS.

Sweaty-Honeydew2242 OP • 2y ago

I worked for a number of different corporations and attended quite a few of these presentations. I though I'd seen it all when one all employee meeting at a past company went on and on about the new company logo and color scheme. Today the dial was turned up to 11.

cdmed19 • 2y ago

Top 1% Commenter

My "favorite" was a 30 min presentation going word by word through the company vision statement (something super generic like innovation for patient health or something) on what each word symbolized.

[deleted] • 2y ago

[deleted] • 2y ago

Isn't Collegeville still around?

icecreamdubplate • 2y ago

Skip to main content Createcdmed19 • 2y ago Top 1% Commenter

Could very well be, it's hard to keep track of all of Pfizer's moves

Rogue_Apostle • 2y ago

I've been acquired by Pfizer twice. The first time I was laid off and the package was enough to pay off my student loans. The second time I eventually left on my own so I didn't get a package but the value of my equity (acquired under the legacy company) was enough to pay cash for a house.

Honestly it's worked out quite well for me. I wouldn't mind being acquired by them again.

I hope that whatever happens OP, it works out well for you in the end.

Recent-Ad865 • 2y ago • Edited 2y ago

Yup. People in to biotech should just accept the acquisition-layoff cycle as a part of the job.

It sucks going through it (I've been through 3), but after the first one it becomes much less stressful. Be thankful the severance benefits are generous compared to other industries.

I've been lucky enough that severance benefits just get pocketed as I slide into a new role or the same with relocation and sign-on bonus benefits (I know a guy who just pocketed $40k in lump sum relo for two moves he never made - he was relocated to a new site then back to the old one but he never sold his house).

By the 3rd one I was working on my resume by the time the first CEO memo came about "tough decisions" and "respect for people". It's a good 6 month early predictor of layoffs long before they are announced.

McChinkerton • 2y ago

I think what stank about this round of layoffs was the string of decisions in 2022 and 2023 when it was obvious what was happening. While concurrently announcing layoffs, they were also hyping the Seagen acquisition as money well spent when in fact its the same decision as they did with COVID vaccine. Putting all your eggs in one basket and hoping for the best. I think everyone agrees layoffs are needed but at least take responsibility and make better business decisions.

[deleted] • 2y ago

Pfizer always guts the company they bought. Even if they have job for you right now. I doubt they will keep you for more than 5 years. I would start looking for job now. see Rinat as example.

Skip to main content+ Create months.

compliancecat • 2y ago

You might need it - it's rough out here and I think Seagen must've paid me super well because I think I have to take a big pay cut no matter what 😞

highesthouse • 2y ago

Just commenting to say I like the username lol

compliancecat • 2y ago

if you know you know 😏

carmooshypants • 2y ago

This is exactly the same as the GBT severance too.

Deep_Caregiver_8910 • 2y ago

And you can thank Seagen leadership for that. It was hard fought.

Secret_Dream_7259 • 2y ago

lol pretty typical Pfizer severance

sameyer21 • 2y ago

There is a retention bonus being paid out in addition to severance.

Deep_Caregiver_8910 • 2y ago

Pretty sure Pfizer doesn't extend medical insurance for two years at the same cost share as employed.

Secret_Dream_7259 • 2y ago

I'm currently on my Pfizer medical insurance at the same cost share as employed (not an ex-Seagen employee).

Skip to main content Create [deleted] • 2y ago

u/Alibaba_B2B • Promoted

You won't believe how much you get for this price!

Learn Morealibaba.com

carmoshypants • 2y ago

As a previous Pfizer acquisition and recent layoff, I feel the same way as you about my time there. Honestly I'm happy that I was let go with a decent severance and was able to find something relatively soon. I know the market now is tough, so good luck! There are definitely greener pastures out there for sure.

Spiritual_Tea_7600 • 2y ago

I was a part of the town hall meeting and it was a very weird presentation. There were really good questions which none of them were answered. We have our own organization meeting tomorrow but I don't think I'll get any real answers. It almost sounded like the changes/decisions will be at the end of the year, but not sure why they were talking about it now.

Oirep2023 • 2y ago

Be prepared for anything

Sweaty-Honeydew2242 OP • 2y ago

I wish there was a recording of the presentation.

Spiritual_Tea_7600 • 2y ago

I believe they did record it. It may be released tomorrow.

KingWooz • 2y ago • Edited 2y ago

The bigger the companies the bigger the circlejerks.

Skip to main content

Create

SeaGen did not have a huge pipe versus PFE so I would guess a 40% RIF where existing PFEers can absorb SGENs work.

FriendlyAd524 • 2y ago

Legacy Seagen here 🙏 I understand how you're feeling - the next few weeks will be tough. Much of what will happen next at Pfizer is out of our control. Hopefully it's not as bad as we think

u/WalkMeOfficial • Promoted

Your CRM doesn't see your ERP. Your copilot doesn't see your email. Most AI is brilliant inside one app, and blind the moment work moves. WalkMe follows the work.

Learn Morewalkme.comCoomassieBlue • 2y ago

As a previous Seagen employee who left before the acquisition, my fingers are crossed for you, comrade.

nyan-the-nwah • 2y ago

Interviewed there in February, seems I dodged a bullet lol. Godspeed friend

Oirep2023 • 2y ago

You truly have

shivaswrath • 2y ago

Ask Wyeth peeps.

That was a doozey.

FunkyHrdina • 2y ago

Create

Bigmachiavelli • 2y ago

If they say "thoughtful" one more time, I'll lose my mind.

In good news, my contract got extended to the end of the year. This probably gives them time to strategize and cut me whenever they want to.

Desperately saving and desperately looking for new role for January next year.

Prophetic_Hobo • 2y ago

So say we all.

[deleted] • 2y ago

Even if you got a job I would 100% not bank on having one through the multiple rounds of layoffs. Or not just getting hit with remuneration next year

Mysterious_Copy_1051 • 2y ago

Just had a "all hands" meeting at my site. Of course they "dont know who the layoffs are affecting" and they "will let us know as soon as they hear something" because theyre "evaluating all positions". The severance packages are pretty good so I'll be fine either way.

[deleted] • 2y ago[deleted] • 2y ago